

Mark T. Maines

As a leadership and team development specialist, Mark Maines has been providing leadership to both non-profit and for-profit organizations for almost a decade. Mark is highly skilled in translating the latest research and thinking from the fields of psychology, sociology and theology into highly effective business practices.

After providing congregational leadership to three churches, Mark entered the for-profit sector as one of the founding partners and Director of Operations for Chronicle Project, LLC., a production company committed to telling the compelling stories of life through visual media , moving people to offer compassion and hope. Mark was the Associate Producer for the award-winning documentary titled, "Dear Francis", currently airing on Showtime.

Mark holds a B.S in psychology from John Brown University and a Master of Divinity from Fuller Theological Seminary and is currently pursuing certification in dispute resolution and mediation from Pepperdine University's School of Law. He specializes in leadership development, organizational behavior and ethics and is a frequent guest lecturer and speaker for various businesses, academic institutions and churches.

Mark lives with his wife, Jeanette, in Pasadena, CA where they enjoy much of what the greater Los Angeles area has to offer.
